DE LA FE

"De la Fe" is the name of the vineyards located in front of the Son Fe Monastery at the foot of Puig Son Fe, just 4 kilometers southwest of Alcúdia. It is the small but ambitious 2.4-hectare wine project of the Bähr family, who run the Ursus Wine trade in Germany.

„Guided by our passion for terroir wines, we were convinced by the diversity of the soil and the ideal exposure of this location to develop and showcase the immense potential of this piece of land in Mallorca.“

Jasmin Bähr, Sommelière & M.Sc. in Wine Management

EXPOSITION

The special location of the De La Fe vineyards significantly contributes to the unique character of the wines. Just a few minutes away from Alcúdia, the organically managed vines benefit from the proximity to the sea, which imparts a subtle saltiness and freshness to the wine. The geographical position between the hill and the mountains of the Tramuntana range creates a "chimney effect" that ensures constant air circulation. This natural ventilation prevents the accumulation of heat and humidity, creating optimal growing conditions for the vines.

SOIL

The soil of the vineyards is as diverse as the landscape itself. At the foot of the hill, the soil is rocky and barren, characterized by limestone rocks. Behind this lies a section with Terra Rossa, a deep, iron-rich soil that stands out due to its red coloration. In the middle and lower parts of the vineyard, there is a layer of clay at a depth of 60 cm, which excellently retains water during the dry summer months. Thanks to these ideal conditions, the vineyard only needs to be irrigated in extreme years.
